

True Life: I'm a

True Life I'm a Staten Island Girl foucault's heterotopias

Artists: Denise Murphy, Ryan McGivern, Jenna Lucente, Amanda Curtis,
Shawn Bishop-Leo and Mikhael Antone
Curator Mikhael Antone

Foucault suggests two primary roles of heterotopia: To create a space of illusion that is for and of the Other, and to create a space of illusion that exposes every real space. It is often compared to a mirror, reflecting society upon itself and making the real seem unreal, as it re-presents, contests, and inverts real social spaces. This exhibition seeks to invert the stereotyped portrayals of Staten Island as seen in the media. This show represents a different cross-section of Staten Island rarely seen on television – a group of artists investigating the idea of “heterotopias” or “other spaces” through an individual female perspective.

July 10th thru August 30th.

Opening Saturday July 10th 7-9pm

Part of Second Saturday Staten Island

SHOW gallery

156 Stuyvesant Place
Staten Island, NY 10301 up the stairs from the Staten Island Ferry, across from Borough Hall
open Wed–Sat 12 noon–7 pm 718-524-0855

For more info: www.shownyc.com www.mikhaelantone.com/show www.secondsaturdaystatenisland.com